

Digadohi:

Lands, Cherokee, and the Trail of Tears

Digadohi means lands of the Cherokees. The story of their removal is recorded in the archaeology of America's landscape and in the traditions and family histories of the Cherokee today.

This PBS video, funded by Missouri Humanities Council and Western Michigan University & directed by Monty Dobson, tells the story of the Cherokee and the Trail of Tears.

*Steelville native and archaeologist, Erin Whitson, discusses the Snelson-Brinker Cabin and its connection to that story. Partially filmed at that location.

View the video and learn more.

<https://www.pbs.org/video/digadohi-lands-chokeee-and-the-trail-of-tears-tsojy/>

